A LETTER TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS

John F. Cooke and cast members from Mickey Mouse Club and Adventures in Wonderland celebrate our 10th anniversary.

It may be hard to believe, but this month The Disney Channel celebrates its 10th Anniversary.

That's right. In April, 1983, The Disney Channel launched in several hundred thousand cable households across the country. Today, The Disney Channel's family has grown to more than 7 million subscribing households.

As those of you who have been with us for a while know, The Disney Channel has evolved considerably these past 10 years. While we continue to offer all your favorite Disney programs, we also strive to provide you with something new and, often, unexpected. These days, The Magical World of Disney features Disney classics like 101 Dalmatians as well as original movies like The Ernest Green Story, which explored in a frank and moving way the difficulties African-American high school students experienced during the integration of our country's public schools in the 1950s. In addition, our series Adventures in Wonderland and Mickey Mouse Club are just two examples of how we have taken the essence of Disney and made it relevant for today's young audiences.

Each year, we also offer more and more original programs for our adult viewers. Our award-winning music specials featuring artists such as Paul McCartney, Gloria Estefan, and Paula Abdul have become an important part of our programming lineup. And in April and May, you will be able to enjoy more great music, with world premiere specials starring Ringo Starr and Diana Ross.

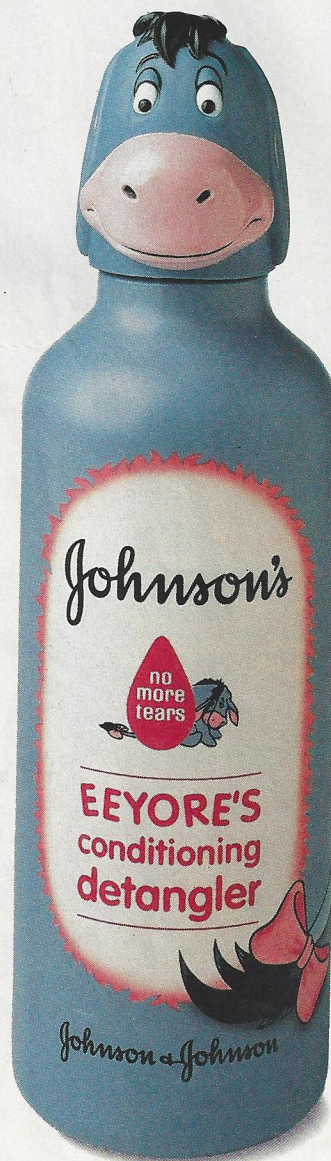

To help celebrate our 10th Anniversary, starting in April, I will be traveling to 14 cities across the country with a caravan of Disney Channel stars. We'll be stopping at libraries to promote reading and literacy and to encourage support for libraries' educational programs. Indeed, rewarding learning is an essential part of The Disney Channel's programming philosophy and is the reason why we produce shows like The Walt Disney Company Presents The American Teacher Awards and Disney's Young Musicians Symphony Orchestra.

I hope you'll take advantage of our great programming, our sweepstakes, and the special events that we'll be offering subscribers in the months to come. If the first 10 years are any indication, you have a lot to look forward to in the next decade.

Love begins to bloom for Belle and the Beast. A Bradford Exchange recommendation.

The Beast once inspired terror in Belle. Now he inspires something else. As they glide across the grand ballroom dancing, the Beast's generous and noble heart captures Belle's own. Could this be love at last? Now you can recall the magic of Disney's Beauty and the Beast with a fine porcelain collector's plate from Knowles China inspired by this delightful film. The "Love's First Dance" plate is available now—and it looks like a smart buy. Here's why it's a Bradford Exchange recommendation:

The "Love's First Dance" plate is an important first issue, the first plate in the Beauty and the Beast plate collection from Edwin M. Knowles China, an affiliate of the Bradford Exchange.

It's an impressive work of art, created from original artwork by Disney artists. Attesting to its importance, each plate will be hand-numbered and accompanied by a corresponding hand-numbered Certificate of Authenticity.

The "Love's First Dance" plate has the potential to appreciate in value, because the edition is limited to a maximum of 150 firing days. Once the edition closes, collectors' demand could exceed the supply of plates and force asking prices up.

The Bradford Exchange...picking winners since 1973. Worldwide, limited-edition plates are the only collectibles traded on an organized exchange. And with offices in the United States and eleven other countries, Bradford is at the very heart of this exciting international market. That means Bradford analysts can often spot trends in the making.

If, for example, you had followed one of our major recommendations in 1988, you would have bought the first issue in the Knowles Cinderella plate series, at just $29.90—a plate that last traded at $90.00.* Or if you had acquired the second plate in this exceptional collection, you would now own a plate that last traded at more than three times its 1989 issue price.

Like any marketplace subject to the laws of supply and demand, the plate market is constantly changing. Some exceptional plates appreciate in value; some plates go down, and many remain at or near issue price. But right now, Bradford Exchange analysts rate the "Love's First Dance" plate as one of the year's top prospects...and we'll back up your purchase with our unconditional 365-day guarantee.

To acquire the "Love's First Dance" plate at its $29.90 issue price—backed by our 365-day guarantee—simply fill out and mail the order form provided. Send no money now. You will be billed when your plate is shipped. But don't delay. The time to get the "Love's First Dance" plate is now—before it has a chance to increase in value.

*Reflects last trades on the exchange as reported in the Bradford Exchange Market Report, Volume IV-11.

Internationally renowned artist William Wegman has had his work exhibited in such prestigious institutions as the Kunsthalle in Lucerne, Switzerland, and the Whitney Museum of American Art in New York. A superb painter, Wegman is best known for his photographs: elegant and witty portraits of his troupe of pet Weimaraners. (Adults will have seen Wegman's work in gal-

Now Wegman turns his artistic hand to classic fairy tales. On April 26, Hyperion Books for Children releases Wegman's Cinderella, the first in a series of "Fay's Fairy Tales." (Fay Wray is literally Wegman's top dog—and an international star of the art world.) With Wegman's ironic and witty retelling, coupled with his beautiful photographs (Fay Wray, for example, is the Fairy Godmother) Cinderella is a rare classic—a book that will delight adults as much as children. In fact, if adults get their hands on this book first, it's likely the kids will never see it.

And also coming this summer on Sunday Night Showcase, don't miss Fleetwood Mac: Going Home, a retrospective concert that also features the rock legends reflecting back on the of the greatest groups in rock history.

Heidi ROBARDS' NEW ROLE

Since his career spans nearly half a century, it would seem that any role played by two-time Oscar winner Jason Robards would be a cinch—right? Not really, says the acclaimed actor, "because every part is a new learning process."

Often, Robards says, the profoundest lessons come when he works with children, as he does with 10-year-old Noley Thornton in The Disney Channel's original four-hour miniseries Heidi. Robards plays Heidi's reclusive and self-tormented grandfather.

"I learn from children," Robards says. "They really do keep you straight, and teach you something, if you're open. I know that when doing scenes with Noley, she was my touchstone to reality. I would depend on her to ensure that I didn't go over the top. Children are honest and straightforward. Adults try to hide their emotions."

Heidi, based closely on the classic tale by Johanna Spyri, was shot entirely on location in Salzburg, Austria, and in the majestic Tyrolean Alps. The miniseries is a world premiere this summer on The Disney Channel.

Good for You THE LATEST WORD ON ALLERGIES

Sniffles and coughs are common in early childhood, but parents typically become concerned when their progeny seem to be sneezing, wheezing, and coughing for weeks on end. How do you know when you need to see an allergist? And what are the latest treatments for the problem?

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, 11 million children—one in five—have an allergy, which is the body's overreaction to an otherwise harmless substance such as pollen, food, or animal saliva. Some kids suffer from seasonal allergies which come and go as local plants, flowers, and weeds bloom. Others react to year-round irritants such as dust mites, pollens, animal dander and saliva, feathers, molds, and occasionally foods. And some kids develop asthma and contact dermatitis (eczema).

David Tinkelman, M.D., clinical professor of pediatrics at the Department of Allergy and Immunology at the Medical College of Georgia, says that most parents ask their physicians or nurse practitioners about allergies after their children have experienced weeks of symptoms that are only mildly relieved by over-the-counter medications.

Many kids with allergies develop night coughing, caused by drainage of mucous down the back of the throat, or by airway reactivity, a mild form of asthma. Either way, it means sleep problems for the whole family. While rhinitis, asthma and eczema tend to run in families, Tinkelman warns that parents shouldn't rule out the possibility of allergy just because they think they themselves aren't—or weren't—allergy sufferers. "People are not good judges of whether they were allergic as kids," Tinkelman says. "They may have had a problem when they were less than six years old, and just don't remember, or they may have never been diagnosed properly."

Parents who suspect that a child may have an allergy big benefit in that they do not cause decreased concentration and sleepiness. "This is a big advancement for children," says Tinkelman, "allowing them to reduce their symptoms while being able to focus on school."

Often prevention strategies work. Depending on the suspected allergens, parents may be advised to vacuum or dust more frequently, to keep their furnace filter clean, to install a humidifier and air conditioner, or to switch the child from feather to foam should discuss their observations with their pediatrician, who may then refer them to an allergist. Over-the-counter medications—properly used—are often effective in reducing symptoms and making a child comfortable. But some children can develop sleepiness, irritability, and decreased appetite from these drugs, so children's reactions need to be monitored closely. Sometimes prescription drugs prove effective.

For children 12 and over, the drugs Seldane and Hismanal, and the soon-to-be-available Claritin, offer a pillows. The American Academy of Pediatrics suggests that families keep windows closed during the pollen season, especially on windy days, and in the morning, when pollen counts are highest. The child should also be kept away from anyone who is smoking.

Parents are often concerned about whether the family pet is the cause of a child's allergy. Animals with fur—cats, dogs, hamsters, and gerbils—often pose problems for allergic kids. Tinkelman advises parents to remove the pet from the child's bedroom or from the family room,

COMMON MYTHS ABOUT ALLERGIES

1. Most children grow out of their allergies.

Actually, allergies can develop at any time, and often hit in adolescence.

2. If you're exposed to an allergy-causing agent long enough, the allergy will go away.

In truth, allergic reactions can intensify without treatment.

3. Hay fever is an allergy to hay.

No, hay fever is just another name for allergic rhinitis, which can typically be caused by trees, grasses, weeds and mold spores.

HOT TRENDS OVER TIME

For parents trying to cope with the realities of the latest fashion trend, it may help to remember the trends of the last four decades:

© COMSTOCK

THE 50s: The poodle skirt, bobby socks, white T-shirts and saddle shoes.

THE '60s: The hippie look, tie-dyes, mini-skirts, the wet look, psychedelic colors, hip huggers, and more colors and florals in mens' and boys' wear.

THE '70s: Bell-bottoms, platform shoes, beads, macrame belts, the maxi look.

The '80s: The safari look, with animal prints, black & white with red and yellow accents (even for baby wear), and an emphasis on practicality.

decreasing the amount of exposure and contact. The best pets for children who are allergic to animals, he adds, are turtles, hermit crabs, fish, and snakes.

In some cases, the allergist will determine the exact allergens a child is responding to by injecting minute doses of possible allergens and monitoring skin reaction. A raised, red welt at the injection site may signal an allergy. Then allergy shots can be given on a regular basis if necessary. Gradually the child should have a smaller reaction or no reaction at all when in contact with the allergy-causing agent.

Allergies can start at any age; they're not just for kids. Tinkelman observes that there is a 33 percent chance that a child will outgrow an allergy—but there exists the same probability that the allergy will worsen as he or she matures. The hormone changes of puberty can trigger a new allergy, as can a move to a more humid or flowery locale.

The good news, though, is that there are effective treatments for allergies. Runny noses and itchy eyes don't have to be an accepted fact of life.

Together SHOPPING WITH PRETEENS: A SURVIVAL GUIDE

Shopping with pre-teens is delicate.

Shopping with pre-teens is not unlike working in the diplomatic corps: it demands subtlety, sensitivity, intelligence data on new trends...

Or so says Rose Rosa, chairperson of the Fashion Design Department at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York. Shopping with pre-teens—actually anyone from 7 to 14—can be challenging to parents as they try to establish budget and taste boundaries that don't automatically condemn their children to being considered out of step with their peers. On rare occasions, a shopping foray ends up being a fun expedition for all. More typically, a shopping foray ends up in tension, frustration, and exasperation.

Rosa says parents need to understand that their vision of a good outfit is probably diametrically opposed to their children's idea of one. She recommends that, before even leaving the house, parents look into the latest fashion trends, check the style sections of newspapers and magazines, and notice what other kids wear to school and for play. If parents find a look they can live with, it may be helpful, says Rosa, for parents to inconspicuously open a magazine to a picture of that look—and see if the idea flies with their child.

Parents can also lay out a realistic budget for the shopping day, providing per item limits or a total dollar amount that can't be exceeded. "It's also good to select the store together, keeping in mind the total budget. Find a store with clothing that is trendy, but in good taste, and priced right."

Once shopping, parents should refrain from actually pulling clothes off the rack. "If you show you like something a lot, your child will probably hate it," says Rosa. "The more successful approach is to literally stand back, and let the child select possibilities. It's better to let him or her try it on and see why it doesn't work."

In the dressing room, parents should never express shock, at least not right away. Rosa suggests parents say, for example, "Do you really like it?" or "What do you think?" If you say an outfit looks horrible, your child will probably want it.

Some parents find that allowing your kid to bring along a friend has its benefits.

QUICK & EASY SNACKS

It doesn't take more than a handful of kids after school to turn snack time into a hectic challenge. Here are a few nutritious ideas for that starving hour, when time is short and food has to be ready fast:

Fruit-in-a-Cone: Cut a variety of fresh fruits in season—grapes, apples, raspberries, strawberries, bananas—and fill an ice cream cone with them. Drizzle with honey and sprinkle with granola or other fun toppings.

Neat Nachos: Spread store-bought tortilla chips on a cookie sheet lined with aluminum foil. Sprinkle with 1/4 cup chopped mild green chilies, drained from the can, and about 1-1/4 cups shredded Monterey Jack or Cheddar cheese. Bake at 400 degrees for about 4 minutes.

Yummy Yogurt: Turn plain-and-simple yogurt into something fun by setting out a variety of fruit and crunchy toppings—such as mini chocolate chips, cereal, peanuts, sunflower seeds. Scoop the yogurt into a bowl, and let the children create their own special yogurt sundaes.

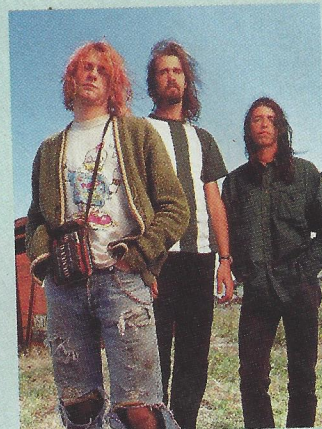

Christine Mallott

CLOTHES: WHAT'S IN FOR '93

For parents preparing to shop for their children—from infants to teens—Joanne Manna, an assistant adjunct professor at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York, says this year's big trend will be the menswear look. "You'll see great pinstripes, with small prints, and a touch of the southwest feeling," Manna says.

Also in is the Pacific Northwest's grunge look (as popularized by groups such as Nirvana), which mixes and matches plaids and fabrics with over-sized shirts and big trousers. Red, black and white are the colors, and over-dyed denims of intriguing new colors will be popular. Manna also sees jewelry—pins, bar-tacks and dangling charms—resurfacing, even in young children's clothes.

© Mark Seligson/TITLINE

Nirvana helped popularize the so-called "grunge look."

"Kids like to go in pairs," says Rosa, "and the kids can be honest and blunt while the parent cannot."

Rosa says parents need to realize that pre-teens and teenagers typically ask themselves just one question when trying on clothes: "Will my friends like this?" They're devastated when a classmate labels an outfit ugly, and clothes that have been criticized will hang in the closet until they are outgrown. Parents need to realize that, like it or not, wearing something that is trendy can help a child in this age bracket to be accepted.

"Shopping with kids is a challenge—but you've got to go with it," says Rosa. "Remember, they'll grow out of it," she adds—referring not just to the clothes but to an awkward and peer-focused stage of life.

Trends THE RISE OF THE MINIVAN

Visit any elementary school parking lot and look around: the minivan is everywhere.

In fact, of the 15 million cars and trucks that are predicted to be sold in 1994, industry experts expect one million of them to be minivans. There are already three million minivan owners in the country: many of them are young families but others are empty nesters who use the vans for travel, sports and hobbies.

The first minivan was produced by Chrysler and appeared in late 1983. "The minivan was a packaging breakthrough," says Thomas Gale, vice president for product design and general manager of minivan operations at Chrysler Corporation. "The idea was to offer a van with a car-like feel, with an easy step-up, with a dash-board that offered good forward visibility, and with steering that gave a good feeling of control."

The van of the '70s was clunky and didn't offer the luxuries of today's minivans. "The economic impact of the fuel crisis delayed the natural development of the minivan," says Gale, who adds that its eventual development was something of a risk.

But minivan sales soared right from the start. Now, says Gale, the minivan is a luxurious vehicle, complete with roof consoles, cup holders, versatile lighting configurations, underseat storage drawers, flexible seating, integrated child seats, and window design that gives even the littlest back-seat passengers a good view.

"Today's minivans are personal-use vehicles," says Gale. "Young families are moving—chauffeuring—their children and their friends around. Minivans are vacation haulers. They give people the freedom to transport things themselves, to pack in strollers and play pens, to pick up antiques. Their appeal is universal."

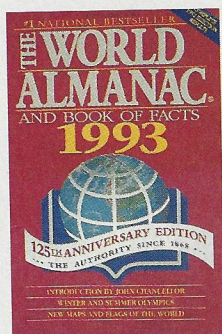

How will the minivan evolve in the next few years? "More luxury," says Gale, including greater use of glass, new materials for the body of the vehicle, and more interior features and flexibility. Chrysler has already researched the possibility of offering small flat television screens and video systems—great for the "are-we-there-yet?" set. And don't be surprised if you see mini-refrigerators and other limousine luxuries in minivans to come.

KidsCooking A CLASSIC FOR KIDS

Alice Waters, owner of the award-winning Chez Panisse restaurant in Berkeley, California, says her new book Fanny at Chez Panisse (Harper Collins, 1992, $20) is an effort to improve the way children see food.

"Eating is central to everyone's experience, yet people don't know where their food comes from or how it's made," Waters says. "We've been pushed to accept convenience and speed, but in cooking and eating, pleasure comes from taking the time. Shelling the peas, for example, is a very fun thing to do, especially for kids."

Waters says kids have to be part of the whole process of creating food, from visiting a farmer's market and selecting the best of what's in season to preparing and serving the meal. She feels developing such food-friendliness in children will even have an ecological impact: "When you understand food, you'll be more careful about land use and water pollution. Good food comes from farms and people who care about the earth."

Fanny at Chez Panisse

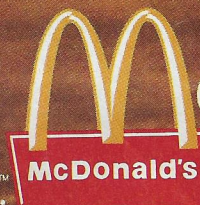

includes stories told from Water's daughter Fanny's point of view (Fanny is now nine years old), stories that include all the steps and routines involved in running a city restaurant. The beginner's recipes are designed to offer some sophistication in taste, but are easy and practical enough to be enjoyed by young children in a busy household.

WHAT'S FOR DINNER MOM?

What you want is what you get.™

BISCUITS FROM FANNY AT CHEZ PANISSE

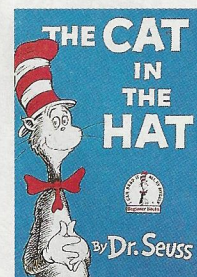

"This is so easy, my mom lets me make biscuits all by myself. I like to eat them when they are hot with some butter and jam, or make strawberry shortcake with them."—Fanny

Makes 12 to 15 2-inch biscuits

1 3/4 cups flour	1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon baking powder	1 cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon sugar	2 to 3 tablespoons melted butter

1. First turn the oven on to 425 degrees. Then put all the dry things—flour, baking powder, sugar and salt—into a medium-sized bowl, and mix with a spoon. Pour in the cream and mix with a spoon until it forms big lumps. Then mix with your hands. At first it is sticky, but as you press it together it begins to form a smooth ball.
2. Take the ball out of the bowl and put it on a lightly floured table. Press the dough out with your hands, fold it back onto itself, and press out again. Turn it around and press and fold again. This is called "kneading" the dough. Do it for about 1 minute.
3. Roll out the dough with a rolling pin, or use your hand to pat it out. It should be about 3/4 inch thick—about two fingers high. Cut into shapes you like with a cookie cutter or an upside-down glass. This makes about 12 round biscuits, but you have to roll the scraps of dough together again to make the last ones.
4. Have a baking sheet ready. Dip each biscuit into the melted butter. Let the extra butter drip off, and then put the biscuit on the sheet. Bake them for 12 to 15 minutes until nice and brown.

RINGO STARR: GOING HOME IS REALLY A DOUBLE DISNEY SPECIAL: A CONCERT WITH RINGO'S ALL-STARR BAND AND A TOUCHING SENTIMENTAL JOURNEY TO THE CITY WHERE RICHARD STARKEY WAS BORN ON JULY 7, 1940. TALKING WITH US THOUSANDS OF MILES AWAY IN LOS ANGELES, IT SEEMS THAT RINGO IS ONLY A HEARTBEAT AWAY FROM HIS HOMETOWN AND THE CHILDHOOD THAT LED TO SUCH EXTRAORDINARY EVENTS.

"If you've lived in a town for 22 years," he confides, "it doesn't matter when you go back—you go right back into it." Intercut with rousing concert footage and an ecstatic Liverpool audience are intimate scenes as Ringo visits his old schools and the hospital he entered at 13 for treatment of tuberculosis. After two years in recovery Ringo would never return to formal education, but his life would take a prophetic turn.

"It was in hospital that I started playing the drums," Ringo reveals. "Every so often the music teacher would come and bring drums... From that day I never wanted to play anything else—and I didn't."

You'll experience a different drummer and much more in this powerful Liverpool concert, part of a sold-out 17-city European tour. Relive songs like "Yellow Submarine," "Boys" from the first Beatles album, the 1974 hit "You're Sixteen," penned by the Sherman Brothers (the Disney team responsible for Mary Poppins), and such new songs as "Don't Go Where The Road Don't Go" from Ringo's star-studded 1992 album Time Takes Time.

Of course, before making history as a Beatle and solo hitmaker in his own right, Ringo paid some Liverpool dues as a sailor and an apprentice engineer, plus a short stint on the railroad so that he "could get a suit," he recalls. "We were very poor and I needed the clothes. But all they gave you was a hat, so I was very disappointed."

We learn that Ringo's schoolboy lunch was a loaf of bread stuffed with french fries or "chips" as they are called in England. And it's simply incredible to hear stories of the bombed streets and buildings of wartorn Liverpool. As he walks with his son Jason, and Harry, his stepdad of 40 years, Ringo naturally reconnects with the life and the people.

"I love the scene with the woman who said that nothing's changed," he says with that unmistakable Liverpool accent and instantly recognizable Ringo chuckle. "It was nice to go back—the Liverpool people are very warm and giving.

They come to you as much as you go to them."

In this program you'll find a Who's Who of world-renowned musicians hard at work, and a multi-generational walk down memory lane. "I'd like to mention how wonderful it was to do this program with my sons and my dad—such a spread," Ringo adds. In this very special Disney Channel special, you'll learn about the tough times and the triumphs of one of the world's much loved, and most lovable, stars.

ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND

"The talented and exuberant cast generate enough energy to power Disney World's Magic Kingdom," noted TV Guide. Our original series premiered in March, 1992, and has won an Emmy Award.

NEWSIES

Recalling the days of the great movie musicals, Newsies is the tale of ragamuffin newspaper boys who went on strike against press lord Joseph Pulitzer, played by Robert Duvall.

MICKY MOUSE CLUB

"If you've never seen the new MMC, try it, you'll like it," wrote Teen Beat magazine. The Disney Channel's hot teen show debuted in April, 1989.

PAUL McCARTNEY: GET BACK

Of this account of Paul McCartney's epic world tour, rock critic Dave Marsh wrote that the film was "a statement of purpose from one of popular music's—and rock 'n' roll's—greatest showmen." The film was a world television premiere in November, 1992.

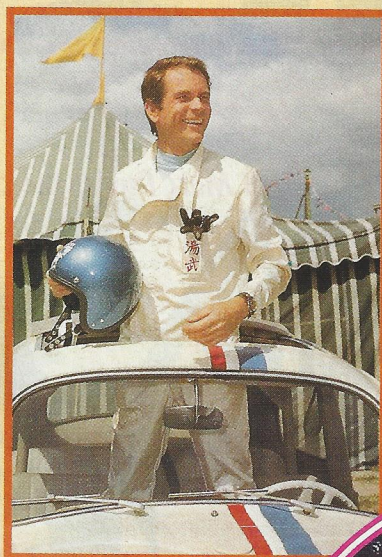

THE ROCKETEER

Disney's faithful adaptation of Dave Stevens's comic book recaptured the lost look of Los Angeles in the 1930s. The hardest design element to create in the adventure saga: the Rocketeer's streamlined helmet and rocket backpack.

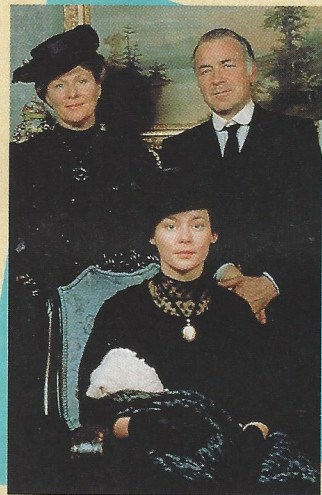

THE ERNEST GREEN STORY

On January 17, 1993, The Disney Channel presented the world premiere of The Ernest Green Story. Morris Chestnut stars in The Disney Channel Premiere Film, a true tale of one young man's determination to pursue an equal education in the face of racial prejudice and violence.

THE LOVE BUG

Disney's antic comedy about a Volkswagen with a mind of its own has proved as popular with Disney Channel audiences as it was with moviegoers upon its release in 1969.

MOTHER GOOSE ROCK 'N' RHYME

Rock 'n' roll met Mother Goose in May, 1990, in this Disney Channel Premiere Film produced by Shelley Duvall. The stars include Little Richard, Paul Simon, and Jean Stapleton. The film has won an Emmy, two CableACE Awards, and the prestigious Peabody Award.

AVONLEA

"It's so intelligent and deeply absorbing," noted the Cleveland Plain Dealer of our original series, which has won Emmy, CableACE, Parents's Choice, and ACT awards since its March, 1992 premiere. Pictured above is Meg Tilly, who guest stars in the episode "Evelyn," airing on Sunday during our special weekend.

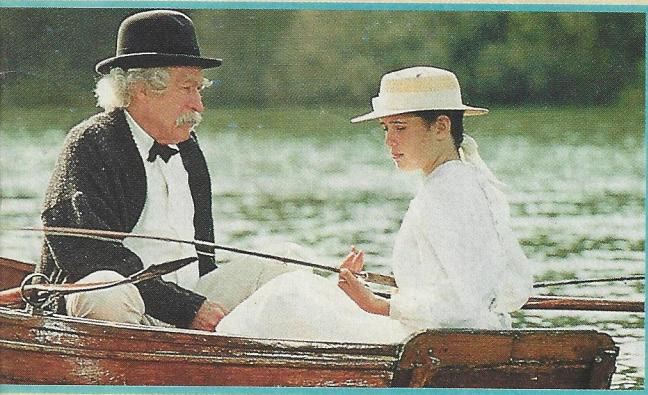

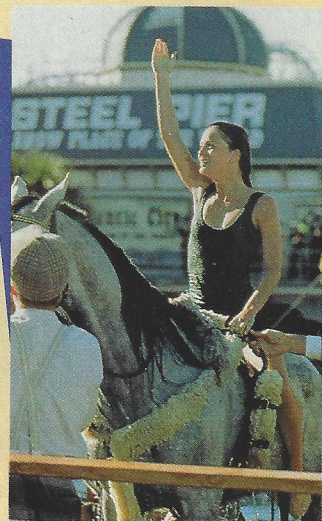

THE RESCUERS DOWN UNDER

Bernard and Bianca, members of the Rescue Aid Society, bring their derring-do to The Disney Channel winging to Australia to help rescue an endangered eagle threatened by poachers. The voices are those of Bob Newhart and Eva Gabor.

WILD HEARTS CAN'T BE BROKEN

This Disney romantic film is based on the true story of Sonora Webster Carver, one of the stunt riders of the famed diving horses at Atlantic City's steel pier. The film was a world television premiere in 1992.

MARK TWAIN AND ME

This Disney Channel Premiere Film, which debuted in December 1991, won two Emmy Awards and three CableACE Awards. Jason Robards portrays America's great writer in his bittersweet twilight years.

Old Black Magic

By Jamie Simons

Ask anyone at Disney about Marc Davis and they will tell you he is a giant of animation. For 42 years Davis reigned supreme as the studio's premiere animator of the female human figure. Tinker Bell is his creation—along with Sleeping Beauty and Cinderella. Yet when you meet Marc Davis what impresses you most about this very talented man is that he's also a very nice guy.

Walt Disney must have thought so, too. From the time Davis started at the studio, in December of 1935, many of Disney's "nicest" characters were Davis's to do. In addition to Tinker Bell and Cinderella, there was Alice in Wonderland, Sleeping Beauty, and the animals Thumper and Bambi. But there is another side to Davis. A side that found its voice in two of Davis's greatest creations, the villainous witch Maleficent from 1959's Sleeping Beauty, and the animal fur-loving Cruella De Vil from 1961's 101 Dalmatians. Why it took over 20 years for the studio to unleash Davis's darker talents is anybody's guess, particularly when you consider he has black magic in his blood.

For generations the Davis family business was not the practice of law or medicine, but the practice of black magic. In Russia, Eastern Europe, and along the coast of Africa, Davis's paternal grandfather made his living as a practitioner of the black arts, earning enough of a name for himself to have performed before the Czar. Davis's father embraced the family business, added mind reading to the repertoire, and took his wife, his son, and his act on the road in Texas, Louisiana, Oregon, California, Missouri, Nevada, Florida, and Oklahoma. Before his 18th birthday, Davis had attended 23 schools and had turned to drawing as an antidote to the loneliness of always being the new kid, the outsider.

If Davis senior could not settle down, Marc Davis found a home at Disney. And with him he brought the restless curiosity, sense of fun, and creativity he'd inherited from his father. Perhaps no character captures the many sides of Marc Davis better than his favorite creation, Cruella De Vil. "A 'nice' character like Cinderella can cry, plead, be strong, but that's about all you have to work with," says Davis. "But Cruella is domineering, incapable of listening, a slam-bang kind of personality. She was so much fun to bring to life, especially when she went berserk."

Davis has other reasons for liking Cruella best. Traditionally, Disney animators divide up a film scene by scene, with different animators working on the same character. Cruella De Vil was one of the rare exceptions. Davis created her, then animated her, in every scene of the film. Cruella is Davis's alone.

Moreover 101 Dalmatians employed a revolutionary new technology in the art of animation—xerography. Now for the first time, instead of a drawing being traced before it was filmed, the artist's original rendering could be copied and put on the screen. "When you trace a cel in ink, it has a tendency to modify and weaken the drawing," says Davis. "101 Dalmatians has a vitality to it that the films that were traced don't have. I know when I see this film, that's the drawing I did, the good stuff and the bad."

Marc Davis may be the only person who can find any "bad stuff" when it comes to his drawings of Cruella. For the public she remains an all-time favorite. And what most of her fans really want to know is, who inspired this formidable lady? A variety of sources says Davis. Some of Cruella, like her split black-and-white hair, was inspired by the description of Cruella in Dodie Smith's book 101 Dalmatians. A lot of her affectations and actions, such as putting her cigarette out in a freshly made cake, Davis credits to scriptwriter Bill Peet. Davis gave Cruella her cigarette holder because at the time he used one himself; dressed her in enormous fur coats to underscore both her obsession with fur and her predatory personality; and made her long, lean and angular because that just "felt right". "Most of all," he says, "it was the terrific job actress Betty Lou Gerson did giving voice to Cruella that told me this character was bigger than life, high in energy and, like a shark, always moving."

To what does Davis attribute Cruella's popularity as one of the screen's great villains?

"Everyone knows someone like her," he says, "someone who is self-centered and selfish. Who never stops talking and is only focused on what he or she wants." But is Cruella De Vil modeled on someone real? Someone Marc Davis knows? She is, he says, but he's not telling who. Marc Davis is too nice a guy for that.
